HITLER WARNS EUROPE AGAIN; FRANCE ANSWERS FOR ALLIES

PREMIER MAPS STATEMENT ON HITLER 'PEACE'

Speech Today Called One of 'Exceptional Importance' in European Conflict.

CHAMBERLAIN DELAYS

British Premier Postpones Address One Day, Pending Daladier's Remarks.

(By United Press)

LONDON — Diplomatic quarters reported today that a radio speech by Premier Edouard Daladier of France this afternoon would be of exceptional importance and would to some extent anticipate a statement on the war to be made tomorrow by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

It was understaood that before he completed his speech Deladier had conducted intimate negotiations with the British government.

It was said that the British government previously had intended to issue a detailed statement of its aims tomorrow but that now the statement would be held back until Thursday. 6

Informants were most guarded in their statements. But it appeared, according to reports, that discussion between the British and French governments during the week-end on Adolf Hitler's Reichstag peace proposals had led to certain divergencies in British and French views—divergencies which were believed to be now, if not settled, at least on the way to settlement.

Less Definite Stand.

It might have been in compliance with France's desire, informants said, that Chamberlain told the house of commons yesterday: "As time goes on both (British and French) governments will consider whether their war aims should be stated in more specific form." This was a much less definite statement than had been expected.

An exchange of views between London and Paris might also have accounted for the postponement of Daladier's speech from last night to tonight, informants suggested.

It was forecast that any statement of British and French war aims might be made in such form that Hitler if he really wanted peace could consider

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Ohio Nationwide News Service, which distributes horse race results and other sports information, today filed a certificate of dissolution with Secretary of State Earl H. The secretary of state signed the certificate, dissolving the corporation and prohibiting further operations in Ohio under the corporate title, the secretary's office said.

The certificate was filed by Attorney Donald R. Hoskins, who planned to get from County Prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett an agreed entry of dismissal on the ouster action.

Ohio Nationwide is a subsidiary of firms owned by M. L. Annenberg, wealthy Philadelphia publisher who has been indicted in Chicago on income tax evasion charges.

SEES SALES AS U. S. DEFENSE

Austin Says New Neutrality Bill, Aiding Allies, Would Be Protective Step.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Senator Austin (R., Vt.) described the administration neutrality bill today as "an act of self-defense because it is designed to aid Great Britain and France."

"We must do everything we can to hasten the victory of the Allies," he told reporters. "We do not need to ask whether this bill is neutral. We only need to know that it's an act of self defense.

"In order to protect our interests, we must make it possible for Great Britain and France to get supplies. That may be regarded as selfishness on our part, but at the same time it can be patriotic."

Austin, assistant minority leader, is one of a half dozen Republican senators supporting the administration measure. It would repeal the embargo on arms sales to warring countries, which would have to pay cash (or get 90-day credits) for all American purchases. These would have to be transported in foreign ships.

Austin expressed his view shortly before the senate began the sixth day of neutrality debate. The chamber agreed to vote at 2 p. m. Eastern Standard Time on a motion by Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) to divide the bill into two parts.

Tobey wants quick action on the provisions which would prevent American shipping and travel in danger zones, with later discussion on the controversial arms embargo section.

FINLAND CALLS UP TROOPS AS RED WARNING

Increase Border Defenses as Notice She Won't Give in to Unreasonable Demands.

HURRIES TO MOSCOW

Paasakivi on Way to Confer With Stalin After Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania Bow.

(By International News Service)

HELSINGFORS, Finland — Determined to maintain her hard-won independence against the threat of Soviet aggrandizement, Finland called her troops to the colors and strengthened her Russian boundary today.

As Dr. Juho Paasakivi, the country's greatest expert on Russo-Finnish affairs, sped to Moscow at the behest of Josef Stalin, the government called up all available troops and took urgent measures to strengthen the border in the Viborg region as proof that Finland will not bow without protest to any "unreasonable" demands the Soviets may make.

It was repeatedly emphasized in official circles that Finland's relations with Russia remain friendly, and the hope was expressed that no unexpected contretemps will result when Paasakivi goes into conference with Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov.

Finland's independence, finally proclaimed after the Bolshevist revolution, was never completely surrendered, even during the long centuries when this country was under Russian sovereignty. Successive attempts to "Russianize" the country failed utterly, and even under the czars, Finland retained the status of a Grand Duchy.

The Finns witnessed with dismay the surrenders of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania to Soviet demands, and when the "invitation" from Stalin arrived at Helsingfors, there were immediate fears that this country lies next in line in the ever-widening thrust of Soviet imperialism.

Map Resistance.

Immediate consultations with other Scandinavian powers led to what is now regarded as a firm determination by all of the countries in the Scandinavian peninsula to resist with all their strength any further westward push by the Soviets at their expense.

Reports received in Helsingfors stated that Sweden had called a quarter of a million men to arms, foreshadowing the possibility of another clash between Sweden and Russia perhaps comparable to the northern European wars that made history long ago.

4 PLANES DOWN

Germans Losers in 'Strength Test' With British Ships.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark—(UP) — Four German war planes which landed in Denmark and Norway were souvenirs today of what appeared to have been a test of strength between the British grand fleet and German warships and bombing planes trying to break the British blockade.

Heavy firing had been heard off the Norwegian coast all day yesterday.

The British admiralty announced that there had been repeated engagements between British cruisers and destroyers and German bombing planes. The day before it was said, a German squadron was sighted southwest of Norway. British warships tried to engage it, the admiralty said, but darkness came and the German ships escaped.

SEA BLOCKADE?

Sweden Sees German Vessels Sailing For North Sea.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — (UNS)—Fishing boats operating out of Gothenburg reported today that they sighted large numbers of armed German trawlers and small cargo vessels proceeding through the Skagerak to the North sea.

It was assumed here that the German vessels might attempt to blockade Great Britain or carry supplies to German submarines in the Atlantic.

Here's What a 'Blitzkrieg' Does

Townsendite Blasts Bigelow Plan As 'Class Legislation'

A representative of the Townsend plan that advocates pensions as high as $200 a month for elderly persons, urged defeat of the Bigelow pension proposal in addressing Mansfield Townsend clubs last night at the courthouse.

The speaker, Beecher Hess of Norwood, scored the Bigelow plan which calls for $50 a month pensions for single persons over 60 and $80 a month for married couples, as "class legislation which is certain to ferment and build up class hatreds."

Hess is president of the board of finance of Norwood and an active Townsend speaker.

The Bigelow plan will come before voters of the state in November and Townsend clubs and leaders in the state have announced their determination to fight it.

Hess said there were two provisions for raising the $300,000,000 a year which would be required to meet the Bigelow pension costs and both would work unfairly against classes of citizens, largely against those who have worked and saved to pay for homes.

"The plan to tax real estate two per cent on all acreage of $20,000 value and over," he explained, "would not be confined to metropolitan areas but to any town or city where the lots and houses in any acre exceed $20,000 value. With this additional heavy tax on big and little home owners there would develop a sharp and bitter feeling of class hatred."

The second means of raising the pension fund, he said, was in a

DOOM OF GRADE PROJECT SEEN

County and State Fail to Agree on Financing With Deadline Set for Tonight.

The proposed $600,000 grade elimination project on route 30-N apparently was doomed today for at least another year when Richland county commissioners and the state highway department failed to agree on a financing plan.

With the commissioners holding fast to their offer of $50,000 over a five-year period, Murray D. Shaffer, Ashland division highway engineer, said the project would be taken off the state highway program today unless a compromise is reached by night.

Guy Stewart, one of the county commissioners, said so far as he knew the county had no intention of offering $50,000 on a two-year basis as demanded by the state, because "we can't do it without a bond issue."

It was the commissioners' day off and C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board, and Ray Hout, the other member, could not be reached for comment.

The state highway department had set today as the deadline for the county's answer on the financing plan.

Shaffer said the state could not accept the county's five-year plan of financing because it was "in no position to carry the financial burden that long."

DETROIT — (UNS) — Chrysler Corporation's Dodge plant was shut down for the third straight day today as corporation officials charged the CIO auto workers union has continued its "50 per cent slow down."

Boasts Germans Are Ready for Bitter Struggle

Chancellor Reiterates "Finish Fight" Threat In Plea For Germans To Give Liberally For Winter Relief; Says "No Power Will Defeat Germany."

(By United Press)

BERLIN — Adolf Hitler defiantly warned the Allied powers today that if his peace terms are rejected Germany is stronger than ever and ready for an unprecedented struggle for victory and "the place in the world that is our due."

"No terror of the moment or forecast as to the length of the war will frighten us," the fuehrer said after repeating his desire for peace.

"No power on earth can force Germany to her knees. War must forge the German people more and more together. Let no one think of his own sacrifice but of the greatness of the sacrifice of the whole.

"We will show the world we intend to live as we see fit and will be able to demand the place in the world that is our due."

He spoke at the opening of the winter relief campaign only a few hours before the first Allied reply to his peace proposals was expected in a speech by French Premier Edouard Daladier, to be followed Thursday by British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

"I repeat our desire for peace," the fuehrer said.

"We have no war claims or claims against the western powers."

The fuehrer also repeated his threat to fight a war of terrible destruction to the finish if his peace offensive fails.

"In case of rejection of our readiness for peace," he declared, "we are determined to take up battle and fight it out one way or another."

Hitler declared that Germany "will achieve victory through attainment of national unity."

"War will only solidify this social entity," he declared in defying Allied demands for the end of Nazism.

"I expressed a willingness for peace," the fuehrer said.

"Germany did not want war with her present foes. They began the war for ridiculous reasons.

"We don't know what the future holds but we know one thing. No power on earth will ever defeat Germany. They will not vanquish us either by military power or economic power."

Hitler said that Germany will not be discouraged by forecasts of a long war.

"We have the eternal life of the nation before us," he said. "The struggle to defeat the treaty of Versailles was difficult. The road ahead of us cannot be worse than what we have gone through.

Determined to Fight.

"We are grimly determined to fight. The greater our determination to make the necessary sacrifices, the more certainly we will be able to impose the peace which we need.

"We do not want to be forever

AT THE FRONT: French Say German Advance Thrusts Fail

(By Associated Press)

PARIS—French troops were reported today to have turned back numerous German assaults south of the strategic city of Saarbruecken with hand grenades and rifle fire.

The Nazi thrusts, these reports indicated, apparently were aimed at breaking French lines tightening on three sides of Saarbruecken. German raiding parties also sought to take prisoners to obtain information on French advance positions, it was said.

In both objectives, French dispatches said, the Germans failed.

The Germans were said to have fought desperately before retiring under a raking fire. Saarbruecken, rich German industrial city around which the operations centered, is near the middle of the northern front.

A heavy artillery battle, launched by the Germans Sunday and answered by French batteries in a 90-mile sector from the Luxembourg border to Lauterbourg, provided a background for the action.

Terse reports of the fighting were contained in a communique issued this morning by the French general staff, which said that "enemy patrols are still very active, notably east and west of the Saar." The communique noted "reciprocal artillery action in the same regions."

Both the French and Germans were reported moving up additional munitions, men and equip-

FALSE ALARMS: Armistice Rumors Stir Berlin, Are Denied

(By United Press)

BERLIN—Rumors of the resignation of the British government and the declaration of an armistice swept Berlin today and brought a charge by the German official wireless that the British secret service had spread them deliberately to aid "war mongers."

Before the radio denied the rumors, there was a rush on wine and liquor stores by persons preparing to celebrate the "armistice."

Business was proceeding as usual this morning when suddenly, all over Berlin, people began discussing excitedly the impending end of the war.

In shops, in offices, on street corners, people gathered excitedly to discuss the reports. Many people asserted that they had heard from others that the radio had announced an armistice—and so it went.

Radio authorities denied they had made any announcement. Then came thousands of telephone calls to newspaper offices and government departments by eager seekers of information.

By early afternoon there were rumors that Adolf Hitler would make an official announcement in mid-afternoon. Then crowds were urged to assemble in front of Hitler's chancellery for a personal appearance by the fuehrer. Then came reports that Benito Mussolini and Viacheslav Molotov, Russian premier-foreign commissar, were on their way to Berlin. Next was a rumor that Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Hitler's official heir, was on his way to Rome.

MAJOR FACTORS OF RISK GIVEN CLOSE ANALYSIS

Every Mortgage Investment Has Different Hazards FHA Officials Say.

Each and every mortgage investment is hazardous in some degree, and the federal housing administration, to protect the interests of all parties in such a transaction, thoroughly analyzes the major factors of risk undertaken in its insuring operations, according to FHA officials.

It is essential to treat mortgage risk as an entity in order to express a measurement of risk in simple terms.

Numerous Risk Factors.

The factors contributing to mortgage risk are numerous, complex, and subject to an almost infinite number of possible combinations in practical cases, FHA officials say.

Included in these factors are various neighborhood and location characteristics. Different types of cities create different types of residential neighborhoods. A variety of factors affects the probable future trends of neighborhoods and of the values of the homes in them. Neighborhoods have varying degrees of stability, and some may be expected to have longer attractive lives than others.

It is necessary to take into account the great variety of architectural styles and designs. They will be acceptable in future markets in widely differing degrees. Different methods of dwelling construction, different room arrangements, different sizes of houses, and different degrees of mortgage risk.

Factors which are vital in mortgage-risk measurement in larger communities are sometimes of less significance in smaller communities and towns.

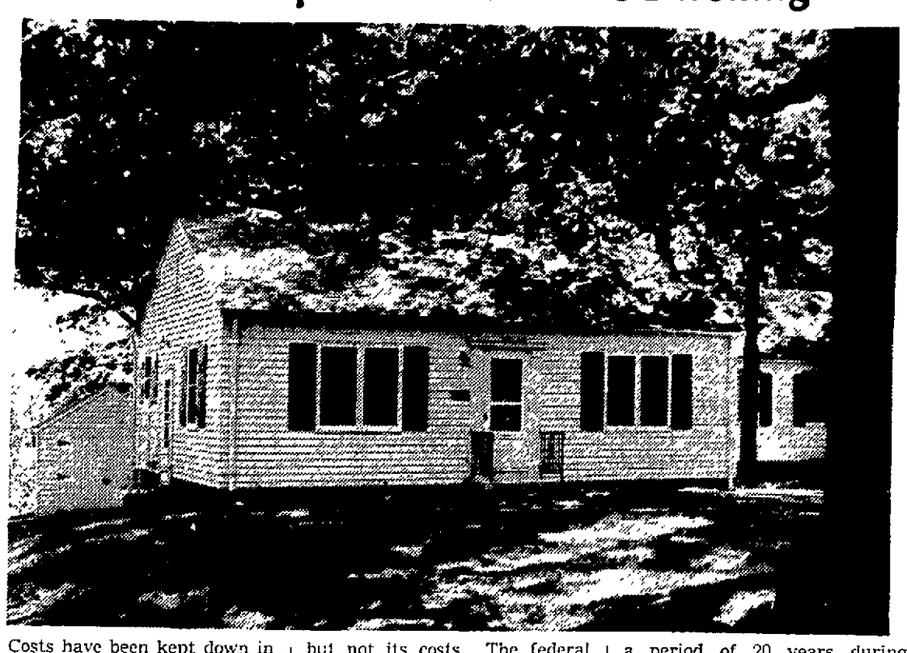
Another important group of factors which affect mortgage risk is the one which embraces the relationship between the physical property and the neighborhood in which it is located. This directly affects marketability of the property, and marketability is basically important characteristic of good mortgage-loan security.

Also included are all those elements of risk associated with the earning power of the prospective borrower, his attitude toward obligations, his ability to pay, and his prospects for the future.

FIRE HITS WOODLANDS

MT. GILEAD—A forest fire hit Morrow county Saturday when it destroyed approximately 400 acres near Marengo. The high wind caused the fire to spread rapidly.

Costs Kept Down On This Dwelling



Costs have been kept down in this home with the result that a popular model has been produced considerably below the $5,000 mark. The plan of this home follows a familiar pattern but not its costs. The federal housing administration insured its mortgage of $3,300 after the FHA officials had assigned the home a valuation of $4,250. The mortgage will be amortized over a period of 20 years during which time the monthly payments will amount to only $22.44, exclusive of taxes and hazard insurance. This home was built in Iowa.

BATHROOM ACCIDENT RATIO LOW, SAFETY COUNCIL RECORD SHOWS

Fewer fatal and non-fatal accidents occur in bathrooms than almost any other rooms in the house, the National Safety Council reports in the 1939 edition of "Accidents Facts," a statistical yearbook.

The Council analyzed 460 home acicdents occurring in Chicago. The study disclosed the following rating of the various rooms in the house with respect to the number of accidents:

Stairs and steps	23 per cent
Yard	19 per cent
Kitchen	18 per cent
Living room	9 per cent
Porch	7 per cent
Bedroom	7 per cent
Basement	6 per cent
Other rooms, including dining room, bathroom, pantry, vestibule, and hallways	11 per cent

The findings of the National Safety Council check with a study of accidents made by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company which indicated that the bathroom accounts for less than one-half of 1 per cent of household accidents.

As a means of still further reducing the number of accidents in bathrooms, the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau suggests the replacement of high tubs on legs with the modern low streamlined baths only 16 inches from floor to rim; the replacement of china faucet handles with metal handles; and the installation of grabbars over the tub, particularly if there is a shower.

Hit 'Dumping' of Unsafe Plumbing On Rural Areas

Action should be taken by appropriate state authorities to prevent the "dumping" of unsafe plumbing fixtures barred from cities upon villages and rural communities, the American Public Health Association asserts in a report of the Public Health Engineering Section.

The committee points out that, whereas the health departments in the larger cities will not permit the installation of unsafe plumbing fixtures, persons living beyond the city limits do not have such protection, unless there is a state plumbing code which is enforced by a staff of competent inspectors.

All plumbing fixtures should be proof against siphonage, that is, the possible sucking of polluted water into the drinking water supply lines, the committee declares.

"In new buildings it is practicable through the use of definite air gaps to give 100 per cent protection against back siphonage," the committee says. "In existing buildings, local conditions should determine the degree of protection which is feasible and practicable.

Compares Present U. S. Army to That of Fallen Poland

JOHNSON SEES NATION SHORT IN MANPOWER

Assistant War Secretary Says 400,000 'Minute Men' Forces Inadequate Defense.

(By United Press)

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va — Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said today that the swift conquest of Poland by mechanized German forces emphasizes the necessity for increasing immediately the manpower and equipment of the U. S. army.

Addressing the convention of International Association of Casualty and Surety underwriters and the National Association of Casualty and Surety agents, Johnson said that the present "minute man" force of 400,000 regulars and the National Guardsmen would, like Poland, find itself inadequate in an "emergency"

It called out today they would find themselves short of combat cars, tanks, machine guns, gas masks, fire control instruments and other necessities," Johnson said.

Johnson said that despite congressional appropriations, there still is a "wide gap" between equipment orders and their delivery.

"Besides when the last congress was in session, we spoke of M-day troops to the number of 400,000 but in the light of present conditions, even the most conservative, estimate a need for 600,000," he said. "Based on the experiences of Poland, we, therefore, should resolve that our M-day forces, once their number is determined, be wholly equipped with all necessary weapons and supplies ready to respond at a moment's notice."

Johnson said that the German victory in Poland taught us "some valuable lessons." He said that Germany's pre-war claims of aviation power "proved correct" and that this was the principal cause of Polish defeat.

"Air power has become as dominant a factor in warfare as even its most enthusiastic proponents had prophesized," Johnson said, adding that the army air corps must become an M-day force ready to "thwart any attack" on the United States

Similarly, the Nazis held the same degree of supremacy in tanks and mechanized units over the Poles as in aviation, enabling them to crush all resistance.

Optimists To Mark 'Gardner Day' At Weekly Luncheon

R. B. Gardner, recently installed as department commander of the American Legion of Ohio, will be honored Wednesday noon at the luncheon meeting of the Optimist club, of which he is a member.

The speaker will be Paul Gnau, Columbus, who was elected department treasurer of the Legion at the time Gardner was elected commander. Gnau will speak on the importance of adhering to American ideals not only in times of peace, but in times of war.

Gardner and Gnau were formally installed, along with other new state officers, at Franklin Post, Columbus, last Saturday night.

Atty. Lewis Brucker is chairman of the "Gardner Day" meeting.

Prized by collectors when first issued, the new Jefferson nickel has been causing some confusion of late, merchants say. One person refused one of the new nickels because it looked like a foreign coin, another thought it was counterfeit. The reason the new nickel has been scarce until recently is because of a big supply of old coins in Mansfield, a banker explained.

BEGINS $30,000 BRIDGE NOV. 8

WPA Announces It's Ready to Go Ahead With Span on Bowman Street.

Work on a $30,000 still and concrete bridge over Touby's run on Bowman street in Mansfield, will start Nov. 8, WPA officials had informed County Engineer Howard C. Sword today.

The start of work on the new structure has been delayed repeatedly while new plans were submitted for WPA approval. The bridge will replace an old steel span on Bowman street near the B. and O. crossing just north of Sixth street.

Because the structure is on a state highway in the city, the county must furnish the larger part of the sponsors' share of approximately $11,000.

Of that amount, the county will provide about $8,000 and the city the remaining $3,000. Sword said The rest of the cost will be financed by WPA.

The project is expected to be one of the major WPA units in the city during the early winter months, providing work for a number of men after other projects are discontinued.

JUDGE HOLDS REFORM SCHOOL WON'T SOLVE JUVENILE PROBLEM

More good can be done for errant youths by trying to rehabilitate them than by sending them to reform school, Probate Judge C J. Anderson said today in reply to Police Chief Meade K. Bates' criticism of "too much leniency" in handling juvenile cases

"What to do with juvenile delinquents is always a big problem, and sending them to industrial schools which release them in a few months is usually not the answer," Judge Anderson said.

"We find in this court that taking the boy or girl out of a broken home and away from a bad environment will do more to put them on the right track than terms in industrial schools where they are still among bad companions," he added.

Judge Anderson blamed most of the delinquency problem on broken homes, bad home training, or lack of training.

"When mothers come to realize that they can do more good at home with their children than working in an office or store for money for entertainment, we will have most of the problem solved," he asserted.

He cited the frequenting of drinking places by mothers as another reason for the growing delinquency problem.

Police Chief Bates blamed the city's boy crime wave on the court's failure to be more strict with offenders, especially those who had been in court before.

959 ADDED TO PAYROLLS HERE IN PAST MONTH

Distinct Industrial Upswing Noted Since Start of War, C. of C. Reports.

A distinct upswing in business and industry during the past month has boosted employment in Mansfield to the highest level in years, the Chamber of Commerce reported today.

Since Sept. 1 when war was declared in Europe and stimulated buying and hiked industrial activity, 959 persons have been added to payrolls in Mansfield.

As the result of the added jobs, employment figures on Oct. 1 totaled 11,569, the chamber reported. This is an increase of more than 2,000 over the number of persons employed here at the same time last year.

The gain is approximately 10 per cent for the month of September and approximately 25 per cent increase over the figures a year ago The increase since Jan 1 was reported at 33 per cent.

9,865 Work In Industry.

In the industrial field a total of 9,865 workers were employed on Oct. 1 as compared with 9,010 on Sept. 1, and 7,670 a year ago. Workers in the mercantile division increased from 1,600 on Sept. 1 to 1,704 on Oct. 1.

The employment pick-up was reflected in WPA and relief rolls in Richland county which decreased to the lowest figure in two years.

The WPA in Mansfield, which has had considerable difficulty in obtaining workers to man projects, reported that it has little more than 600 workers on its rolls, the lowest number at work in the county since the summer of 1937.

Relief officials said the number of families on relief rolls totaled less than 300 and anticipated further decreases in view of the continued upswing in business.

MILLERSBURG — An unusual charge was made by Frank Nommay of Glenmont, against his wife, Amanda Nommay, in a divorce petition on file in common pleas court here.

The plaintiff, who states he has been married to the defendant since April, 1921, denies the parentage of four of their five children born during their married life. The children are aged 12, 10, four, two and one year. The only one of which he claims to be the father is the four-year-old child whose custody he asks.

FAIR ENOUGH!

American Ships Popular Now But No One Traveled On Them During Dry Days

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—In the matter of the distressed Americans abroad who have been having such trouble finding ship room for the voyage home, the background of the picture needs retouching to recall that during prohibtion, Americans, bound abroad to catch up on their drinking, avoided American ships and built up the passenger trade of European countries at the expense of the American service.

Any flag but the Stars and Stripes was good enough for most American travelers then and European nations used money which they owed the U S. A to build boats to catch their trade

In justice to the tourists it must be allowed that they were sick of the noble experiment and made a pathetic spectacle in their attempts at nonchalance as they waited for the steward to rattle the key in the door of the lounge by way of intimating that they had now crossed the three-mile limit and could now get drunk on the real McCoy.

From time to time the stewards fudged a little and would pop corks before the ships tied loose and a merchant going aboard to sell a load of hides or buy caviar for the suburban trade at home would discover himself attended by enough loving friends to swing an election, all with their tongues hanging out like red neckties and all sniffing the close air of the passageways for the fumes of martinis and Scotch.

When time came to shove off they would come yodeling down the gangplank pickled to the eyeballs and vowing to sweep some money together right soon and go abroad themselves, and not on any American ship, either, but on one of those French, British, Italian or German boats, or possibly a Dutchman.

Not only citizens in private life, but officials and members of their families favored the European lines, and the American service was so badly neglected that just now, when an emergency comes, it is obvious that the vast majority of the stranded landsmen must have gone over on foreign boats by choice.

True, a policy of cheating was adopted on the American ships, but now and again some bloodless he-Harridan of the dry political persuasion would rear back on his hind legs in congress and utter a bawl of moral outrage at this wanton violation of the sacred amendment in plain sight of Old Glory. The lid would then go down again with a loud clank of publicity The result was that Americans couldn't be sure of getting a decent drink on their own ships and rather than take a chance avoided them altogether. The United States boats lost reputation with their own people, and some upsetting experiences with ribald stewards helped to unsteady the confidence of those who were not primarily interested in getting tight with the least possible delay but only wanted comfort and a reasonable degree of safety.

In the course of this 'fun-spell the European ships got almost all of publicity both in text and pictures because the celebrities who made print were aboard them. American ships were for old folks, dowds, dummies and persons one just naturally would prefer not to have any truck with until a time came when there was some risk aboard the European lines, then, very suddenly, a whole season's catch on European soil became passionately patriotic to the grand old American name.

It might be remembered, too, that among this worried and daily more indignant slew, there were many to whom American soil was not even dirt under their feet—men and women of the old bandit families who have been living abroad for years on income earned for them by American workmen and paid them through their bankers.

This class came home only to split up the estates of deceased relatives, get periodic Reno divorces, and escape periodic wars, and they are related, in spirit, to that other group of less wealthy but no less lazy and contemptuous loafers who thing the old world has much better manners, think bathing is overdone at home, and love the French and Italians because the franc and the lire are cheap

And with them may be lumped those semi-naturalized foreigners who endure life here just long enough to qualify for citizenship and passports and then return to Europe and other far places to pose as Americans, pester the consuls and meddle in the affairs of other nations with no intention ever to be real Americans in heart or in act or even to learn the American language.

There are some astonishingly foreign Americans holding American citizenship abroad who, in times of danger, yield nothing to the most obstrereous native patrioteer in their devotion to the Stars and Stripes.

The repatriation of strayed and stranded Americans if government business, no doubt, but not all of them have an urgent claim on the indignation or sympathy of the state department or the folks at home.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The temperature was 107 in the shade (the thermometer was understating things) and on one stage at Universal Deanna Durbin was doing a scene in a fur coat. On another Marlene Dietrich was wearing fuss-and-feathers, and on yet another there was a young woman who showed good sense.

She was bathing, in the nude, with a duck. A beautiful white duck named Abner. The young woman—her name is Sandra Lea Henville but she's commonly called Sandy—wasn't wearing the usual stitch of flesh-colored swimsuit, and her tub wasn't submerged in foam She was, quite frankly and happily, enjoying a bath for the camera—and to hell with the heat and Joe Breen.

The duck was an afterthought. There wasn't any duck named Abner in the stage play, "Little Accident," nor in the movie made from it later. There wasn't even a duck when the play and movie were revamped as a starring vehicle for Baby Sandy and Hugh Herbert. When Charles Lamont, the director, met Abner he was entranced—and Abner was written into the script

Abner's life story should be an inspiration to all ducks everywhere. Mrs. George Brown, wife of a studio driver, won Abner for a penny in a school bazaar raffle Her first though was the roaster, or perhaps a stew But en route home Abner quacked Abner has a wistful, personable quack It saved his life Mrs. Brown became attached to Abner—and then she thought of pictures Mr. Brown introduced Mr. Lamont to Abner, and the rest is history soon to be screened.

For the scene at hand, the big ducking, Sandy's mother placed her bundle of joy into the canvas tub. While Kathleen Howard and Bobby Trefl, actresses, assumed their roles on either side of the tub, Charles Lament took Abner from the arms of Mrs. Brown and deposited him, splash, into the water. Abner and Sandy appeared about equally disconcerted. Abner, of course, had been bathed prior to the immersion—sterilized, in fact, with castile soap and boracic acid, for Sandy's protection. I failed to note whether Sandy had been similarly treated, in courtesy to Abner, but if not—well, a duck can't have everything

The subsequent goings-on were enjoyed by all concerned At least Sandy gave forth with her entire repertoire of emotion — from squealish delight to nonplussed tears.

Sandy almost spoiled things, once, by blowing a kiss to her dad behind the camera, forcing papa to retreat hastily, and Lamont's hands and arms—pushing Abner into closer attention to his duties—doubtless got into the film. But these were small inconveniences.

Barrow Not Satisfied, Plans to Bolster Yanks

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
(News-Journal Sports Editor)

THE kind of scoring mistakes that one would imagine seeing only in a league of the Ohio State variety were very evident in the late world's series.

Two of the rankest rulings ever called in a classic were pulled in the final game Sunday, and veteran sports writers at the tussle are still laughing over the decisions. No Ohio State league scorer could ever be accused of duplicating the world's series errors in judgment.

In the seventh inning of the fourth and final game Sunday, Frank McCormick blasted a whistling liner down third baseway to Red Rolfe. The ball took a wicked hop and struck Rolfe in the shoulder.

All of the writers took it for granted that it was a hit, and when the official scorer ruled it an error, the sports reporters just laughed and laughed in the manner of Little Audrey.

Then in the weird ninth frame, Joe Gordon slapped a grounder to Billy Werber, who threw to the plate in an attempt to catch Joe DiMaggio, but the Yankee outfielder slid under Ernie Lombardi and was safe with the tying run.

It was called a hit by the official scorer, but the majority of the sports writers agreed that it was a fielder's choice as Werber could easily have erased Gordon if he had elected to make the throw to first.

These ridiculous rulings did not have any affect on the outcome of the ball game, but they merely prove that the Reds weren't the only persons at Crosley field Sunday who were slightly bewildered.

Bill McKechnie's prestige as a manager took a terrific drop in the estimation of his National league colleagues in the 1939 series. Charlie Keller's plate-effectiveness was attributed to "Deacon Bill's" failure to obtain information on what type of balls the youngster tagged. He was also criticized for playing the weak-hitting Craft, who could have made a lot of difference in a couple of ball games with a timely swat or two, instead of a world's series veteran like Al Simmons. "McKechnie makes more mistakes than any other National league manager," one veteran sports writer remarked after the third defeat.

Reds Must Rebuild To Meet Challenge.

WITH the Cardinals looming as a more dangerous foe next year, the Reds will be forced to make several changes to accept the challenge

Linus Frey at second base is no more than a minor league ball player, and Bill Myers' attacks of jitters are too numerous to make him a dependable shortstop on a pennant-seeking team

Ival Goodman is the only outfielder who can be labeled as a major league gardener. Craft can field, but he is a total loss at the plate Berger and Simmons are through DiMaggio and Bordergray are not likely to help the situation next year.

Without Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters, it is difficult to see how the Reds could have won the flag this year.

The prize ball player in the Cincinnati lineup is Frank McCormick, the first sacker.

New York Almost Certain Winner.

REGARDLESS of who wins the National league title next year, New York will again represent the American circuit, it now appears certain The Yankees are unbeatable with their present lineup, and they could easily strengthen their forces next year with minor league replacements if they thought it advisable The Yankee farm system has produced talent of such caliber this year.

The only radical change which may alter the Yankee lineup next season is at first base, the position for which Tom Henrich is now being groomed Henrich is a better hitter than Dahlgren, but has yet to master the intricities of first base play

PITT ON TOP

CHICAGO — (INS) — The Azzi Ratem football ranking system today named Pittsburgh the nation's number one college football team at this stage of the season. Tulane was ranked second and Oklahoma third.

Ohio Coach Believes Foe Will Be Hard to Handle After Oklahoma Defeat.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Ohio State bumps into football's toughest assignment Saturday afternoon—catching a good team on the "bounce" after an upset defeat.

And Northwestern's Wildcats are more than likely to rebound more dangerously than ever after opening setback from Oklahoma.

Fritz Mackey, Ohio State scout reported today that Northwestern beyond a doubt is as great a team on the field as the one which on paper was awarded the national grid championship in August.

"The Wildcats just couldn't seem to click against Oklahoma," Mackey said. "The visitors got Northwestern off balance early in the game and Northwestern never did get organized. It should be remembered, too, that Oklahoma had a darned good team. The hot weather may have hurt Northwestern more than Oklahoma.

Mackey and Coach Francis Schmidt both believe the invading Northwestern gang will be that much harder for Ohio to handle because of the defeat. Saturday will be the first Big Ten game for both schools

Bill De Correvont, Northwestern sophomore, lived up to all his advance ballyhoo as a ball carrier par excellence, Mackey reported.

"The kid seems to have rubber legs in the amazing way he stops and starts while running. He looks a good deal like Red Grange which should be a topoff for Ohio," Fritz said. De Correvant who weighs only 170 pounds was manhandled by the Oklahoma tacklers but should be in good shape for next Saturday.

Coach Lynn Waldorf is fortified by competent reserves three and four deep at every postion, Mackey said Two or three of last year's regulars have lost their starting jobs to newcomers.

All of which was enough for Schmidt to send his Buckeyes through their most painstaking drill of the season last night. The Buck mentor carefully pointed out mistakes from the Missouri victory, especially poor judgment of potential pass receivers in getting into the clear.

Schmidt directed attention to the development of Campbell Graf, junior reserve guard, as a placement kicker to back up Charley Maag.

With Maag handicapped by an ailing ankle, the Bucks were without a first class place booter last Saturday. Maag will be ready for full time action this week but Schmidt doesn't want to be caught short again.

15 Prep Teams, Winners of Four Straight, Fight for Ohio Title

By FRITZ HOWELL.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— A nip-and-tuck battle for the drum major's berth in the Ohio high school football parade was in progress today, with at least 15 teams boasting four victories in four starts and several others having three wins in as many attempts.

While these teams were keeping their records unsullied over the week-end, several top-notchers fell for the first time. Among those who bowed out of the championship scrap were Canton McKinley, Findlay, Dayton Oakwood, Akron Buchtel and Steubenville.

Still plowing along in unbeatable fashion were Massillon and Portsmouth, winners of 10 straight a year ago. Massillon wrecked Erie (Pa.) East by 66 to 0 last week-end, the worst defeat the Keystone Staters had suffered in 17 years, while Portsmouth's mighty Trojans swept Steubenville Wells out of the title picture by 39 to 6. A toal of 20,000 fans saws the two contests, 12,000 at Massillon and 8,000 at Steubenville.

Others in the four-victory class included Ironton, Fremont Ross, Cleveland Shaw, Akron St. Vincent, Columbus West, Columbus Grandview, Orrville, Dayton Fairmont, Xenia O. S. & S O. Home, Chillicothe, New Philadelphia, Toledo Waite and Crestline.

Bracketed in the three-victory division were Hamilton, Middletown, Lima South, Wooster, Dennison, Alliance, Lorain and several others.

The "clean slate" group is due for another slash this week-end as Massillon tangles with Alliance, and Chillicothe meets Portsmouth in the standout battles. The Massillon-Alliance scrap pits the State's high-scoring team against Hillis Hume, 17-year-old Alliance quarterback, who tops the individual scorers with 84 points. His 14 touchdowns led the Aviators to three straight wins, but Massillon is favored to stop him, or at least slow him down to a walk, this week.

Massillon and Portsmouth presented a pair of free-scoring boys on their own hook last week. Substitute Back George Fabian of Massillon, and Co-Captain Jim Barker of the Trojans, contributed 19 points each to their teams' totals. Alliance had a holiday, but Portsmouth's next opponent, Chillicothe, romped over Columbus Aquinas by 23 to 0.

A couple of schools, Circleville and Akron West, grew tired of their door-mat roles and slapped down favored foes Circleville, which hadn't won a game in two years, swarmed over Greenfield McClain, 26 to 12, handing that club its second setback in two seasons and avenging a 75 to 6 walloping it suffered a year ago. Akron West, which had lost 12 and tied one of its last 13 games, shut out Akron Central 12 to 0. Akron Buchtel, winner of the first three games this year, bowed to Akron North by 14-7.

Canton McKinley's powerhouse dropper a 13-0 decision to Sandusky as that club hit the comeback trail following last week's loss to Toledo Waite, Sandy's first defeat in two seasons. Waite kept up its hot pace by taking Toledo Woodward 28 to 0 for its fourth consecutive win. Dayton Fairmont also entered the "Four-Won" circle by beating Miamisburg, 7 to 6, for the first time since 1934.

Ironton grabbed its fourth victory by handing Springfield its fourth straight defeat, 13 to 7; and 7,500 watched Cleveland Shaw smother Shaker Heights 25 to 7 for another four-straight career. Hamilton and Middletown, powers of the Southwestern area, rolled on, the former with a 33-2 conquest of Lima Central, and the latter with a 44-0 win over Dayton Roosevelt.

Findlay couldn't stop the pass attack of little Bob Brunover and big Bob Snaw of Fremont Ross, and lost by 20 to 6. It was Fremont's fourth victory and Findlay's first setback.

Geno Balconi, Sandusky's captain and halfback, was probably the individual star of the week-end. He counted the two touchdowns that beat Canton McKinley, one coming on a 42-yard jaunt, and the other on a 10-yard crack off tackle. The pair of markers gave him nine for four games.

Cleveland Shaw's win over Shaker Heights was a masterpiece, the victors shoving their four-game scoring total to 102. Back in 1935 the squad played the entire season without getting a point. But Saturday Junior Halfback Bill Keenan roared 80 yards to a touchdown in the first two minutes, and Bill Haker, 131-pound substitute halfback, ran 45 yards for another in the last 30 seconds.

Wilmington, loser of four straight, has a halfback who has starred in all four contests, rolling up a total of 514 yards from scrimmage. He's Earl Jones, member of the Associated Press All-Ohio squad of 1938.

Seeks McQuinn From St. Louis

New York Owns Keystone Pair "That Will Knock Your Eyes Right Out," Says Weiss.

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—(AP)—President Ed Barrow of the Yankees and George Weiss, head of the Yankee farm system, are an insatiable pair, with no conscience whatever.

Fanning over the late lamented world series, I asked President Barrow why in the world the four time champion now would have feelers out for George McQuinn, slugging young first baseman of the St. Louis Browns

Hadn't Babe Dahlgren done well enough in the series? Hadn't he contributed as much as any Yankee toward licking the Reds in the first two games with his bat, and hadn't he fielded flawlessly in all four contests? Why McQuinn?

"Why?" echoed Barrow. "Why, because McQuinn is a fine hitter. He would make us a little stronger, wouldn't he?"

Barrow said, however, and with some regret, that he didn't believe he would be able to get McQuinn. It was evident there was no use in trying to appeal to his finer, more generous nature, so Weiss was tackled.

* * *

"Aren't you a little ashamed sometimes?" he was asked "Here the Yanks have the best team there is by a country mile They're murdering everybody Do you have to keep bringing up these kids like Charley Keller?"

"Ashamed?" he said, startled. "Hell, no I've got a job to do and I'm doing it."

"But you haven't seen anything yet," he laughed, wickedly. "I've got a pair out at Kansas City that will knock your eyes right out. Wait until the New York fans see them. Phil Rizzuto at shortstop and Joe Priddy at second base. What a pair!"

He was reminded that, after all, the Yankees already had the greatest keystone combination in Frank Crosetti and Joe Gordon. "Don't try to tell me this Priddy is as good as Gordon," I said. "I suppose you have a couple more Kellers staked out somewhere, too, with maybe a spare Joe DiMaggio?"

"You would be surprised," he answered "This Priddy is too good to be true. He's as acrobatic as Gordon, honest. I don't know what Gordon can do that he can't."

So—it's no longer a question of what to do with the present Yankees. There are more of them coming in clouds. And each one reputedly better than his predecessor.

Unless the heirs of Col. Jacob Ruppert ever get together and agree upon a sale of the baseball properties, the Yankees are extremely likely to go on winning everything in sight for four more years.

To give the annual accounting of the Yankees at this time, it seems obvious that they will need a new catcher within a few years. Bill Dickey, their genius of the mask, is getting along. Buddy Rosar is ready to step into his shoes.

Cubs, Sox Vie In Final Game

Americans Knot Series as Lee Stops Bruins, 6-1.

CHICAGO —(U.P.)— Ted Lyons, veteran White Sox pitcher, faces Earl Whitehill of the Cubs on the mound today in the final game of the Chicago City series. The Sox evened the series at three games each last night by defeating the Cubs, 6 to 1.

Thornton Lee of the Sox yielded only four hits while his teammates were collecting nine from Charlie Root and Dizzy Dean. Three of the Cub hits came in the first inning when they scored their only run.

President Phil K. Wrigley of the Cubs announced that nine of his players had signed 1940 contracts. They are pitchers Bill Lee, Larry French, Charlie Root, and Vern Olsen; Catcher Gus Mancuso; outfielders Bill Nicholson, Phil Cavarretta and Jimmy Gleeson; and second baseman Billy Herman.

Godoy to Get Title Chance

Promoter Mike Jacobs announced this bout last night, emphasizing that Godoy beat Tony "roll out the barrel" Galento twice during Godoy's United States campaign in 1937.

THEATERS

ENID BENNETT, one of the screen beauties in the silent era, returns to the talking films in "Meet Dr. Christian," which will star Jean Hersholt. . . .Next starring vehicle for Laurel and Hardy is "The Flying Deuces." . . . In case you are confused "Allegheny Uprising" and "Allegheny Frontier" are the same picture, but as yet no one seems to know what title it will be exhibited under, not even the producer. . . . "Dynasty of Death" which Walter Wanger will produce, is a timely treatise on the behind-the-scenes activities of war barons and munitions makers. . . . "Send Another Coffin" is the un-funny title of a comedy which has a cast this long, including Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford, Ruth Terry, Claire Dodd, Phyllis Brooks, Henry Armetta, Alan Dinehart and a dozen others.

Problem Play.

A modern problem play is treated in a modern way in "Here I Am A Stranger," one of the Madison features for Wednesday and Thursday. A woman divorces her husband, a newspaperman, and marries a wealthy attorney in order to provide for the future of her small son. Years afterward the boy enters the university which had been his father's alma mater and begins to meet old friends of his real father. The cast includes Gladys George as the mother, Richard Dix as the father, Richard Greene as the boy and Brenda Joyce as the girl. This is Miss Joyce's first role since her debut in "The Rains Came." The second feature is a sea story, "Mutiny on the Black Hawk."

Glorifies Coast Guard.

"Coast Guard" glorifies another one of Uncle Sam's family units and shows the scope of work that is done by this branch of the federal service. It takes the audience from the shores of Alaska where the Coast Guard watches over the colonies of seal to the shores of Mexico; shows them patrolling the iceberg areas, winging over little frequented shorelines, and ambulance planes taking men from ships at sea. Ralph Bellamy, Randolph Scott and Frances Dee enact an interesting story against the background of the coast guard service. The picture will be shown at the Ohio from Wednesday through Friday.

Invaded Mexico.

Bette Davis adds to her long list of character roles as the mad Empress Carlotta in "Juarez," in which she is co-starred with Paul Muni. Basil Aherne, Claude Rains and John Garfield are in the cast. This is the story of the disastrous attempt of a European nation to get a foothold in North America, when Napoleon III of France tried to dominate Mexico, and in which Maximillian and Carlotta are the tragic pawns. "Juarez" is one of the features at the Ritz Wednesday and Thursday, with "Undercover Doctor" as a second feature.

'Kid From Texas.'

Dennis O'Keefe is a Texas cowboy who thinks he can play polo just because he's been riding horses for some time without falling off, but when he gets into a game in Long Island's exclusive polo colony, he learns a thing or two. Florence Rice plays the girl who has a hand in the education of "The Kid From Texas." The second film at the Majestic is "Idiot's Delight," with Clark Gable and Norma Shearer in one of the stage's most unique love stories.

Jungle Story.

The headwaters of the Amazon, in the South American jungle, is the scene of a strange, dramatic story in which the fate of 11 white people is decided by a fleeing killer. He decides which of the five from the group shall board the stranded plane when it takes off again, and which shall remain to face the savage headhunters who are closing in on them. The picture gives Chester Morris and Lucille Ball excellent roles, while Joseph Calleia plays the killer. Lupe Velez is seen as "The Girl From Mexico," the second feature.

'SEEING EYE'

MONTREAL—(U.P.)—By the end of 1940 the Canadian National Institute for the blind may have its own training center for dogs, to be used by sightless persons, in full operation. Through an arrangement with the "Seeing Eye Incorporated" Morristown, N. J., a limited number of candidates from Quebec will be accepted for intensive training.

To Correct Constipation Don't Get It!

Why let yourself in for all the discomfort of constipation—and then have to take an emergency medicine—if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your difficulty, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy toasted cereal—a natural food, not a medicine—has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day, it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, month after month, by the pleasantest means you ever knew!

Eat All-Bran daily, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Jackie Coogan to Appear In Stage Play Here Nov. 16

Mansfield will see its first comedy stage production in more than a year when the George Abbott production "What A Life" is presented here on Nov. 16, with a cast of Broadway and Hollywood players, headed by Jackie Coogan.

The comedy, which ran for two years in New York City and described by Walter Winchell as "the funnist show in town," will play the Madison theater for one night only. The seat sale will open within a few days.

In addition to Coogan, famous one-time child star of movies who has had a stormy time of it in recent months, what with court suits over the money he made as a child, and now his marital troubles with Betty Grable, there is Josephine Dunn, star of silent pictures, Frank McGlynn, stage and screen player, and Cyrilla Dorne, youthful Broadway star.

McGlynn became famous when he played Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's stage play and the same role in Shirley Temple's picture "The Littlest Rebel." More recently he portrayed the Civil war president in Warner Brothers' picture "Lincoln In the White House," and a school master in the Irene Dunné-Charles Boyer film, "Love Affair."

The show will play here at regular road show prices.

These payments are calculated at Household's new reduced rates of 2% monthly on balances up to $300 and 6% yearly on balances over $300 to $500. These rates are less than legal maximum, and are the same to everyone — one price to all. Only borrowers sign — no endorsers on any loan. No credit inquiries of friends or relatives.

STOCKS, PACED BY STEELS, HIT COMEBACK TRAIL

Leading Issues Post Gain of Fractions to 2 Points in Higher Market.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Steels led the stock merket on a moderately fast come-back today and leading issues posted gains of fractions to 2 points.

Conspicuous on the early forward jaunt were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Eastern Airlines, Phelps Dodge, Westinghouse, American Can, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, U. S. Rubber and American Smelting. There was no particular news to account for the shift.

The war-peace theme continued to dominate boardroom discussion, but the idea seemed to be gaining ground that, even if the European conflict comes to a sudden halt, American business already has attained sufficient momentum to extend its stride much farther.

Among items scanned for market clues were:

Figures of the Federal Reserve board for the week ended Oct. 4, disclosed member banks in 101 cities, for the seventh consecutive week, enjoyed an upturn in commercial loans. The latest increase amounted to $22,000,000.

The Automobile Manufacturers association, in a preliminary estimate, placed factory sales of motor vehicles in the United States and Canada during September at 200,780 cars and trucks, or 94 per cent over the August aggregate and 124 per cent above the total in September, 1938.

A. F. of L. Rejects 'Blanket' Endorsement of Roosevelt

LEWIS URGES JOINT LABOR BOARD ATTACK

Federation Meeting in Cincy Votes 'Non-Concurrence' in Resolution on F. D. R.

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI -- The American Federation of Labor convention voted non-concurrence today with a resolution calling for endorsement of President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Without debate or the tumult that attended previous discussion of the Roosevelt administration, the convention upheld a resolution committee finding that the federation could not give the "blanket endorsement" called for in the resolution submitted by the Connecticut State Federation of Labor.

In the voice vote on the committee's recommendation for non-concurrence there appeared to be a close division of "ayes" and "nays," and AFL President William Green ruled the vote supported the committee.

The committee pointed out that the Connecticut proposal drew no distinction between congressional and administrative action in its plea for a New Deal endorsement and opposition to "the conservatives of both parties."

The report pointed out the A. F. of L.'s record of criticism against the National Labor Relations board, its appointees, the removal of the prevailing wage from the relief bill and the first executive reorganization bill.

"The hearty support which the trade union movement has given to a large number of 'New Deal' measures," the report said, "should not lead this convention to give its blanket endorsement to all legislation which has been proposed or enacted by the so-called 'New Deal,' neither should our opposition to certain 'New Deal' legislative and administrative acts permit us to voice condemnation of the 'New Deal'."

URGES JOINT ACTION

SAN FRANCISCO — (U.P.)—The Congress of Industrial Organizations opened its annual convention today to hear John L. Lewis, its president, suggest that the CIO might join the American Federation of Labor in attacking the National Labor Relations board.

Lewis' annual report of 20,000 words assailed recent decisions in which the board ruled against industrial unions in favor of the AFL craft unions. These decisions, he contended, indicated the board was leaning over backward because of AFL criticism of decisions favoring industrial unions over craft unions.

REGISTRATION TOTAL SLUMPS

Board Predicts Number to Fall Short of All-Time High Despite Final Rush.

Despite a last-minute flood of registrations and transfers last night, county board of elections officials predicted today that total registration in Mansfield this year will fall short of the all-time high of 19,500 two years ago.

The election board office and corridors in the basement of the courthouse were jammed last night as scores of Mansfielders sought to establish their eligibility to vote in November. The election board office remained open until 8:30 p. m.

Unusual activity on the part of Republican and Democratic party workers and interest in the vote on the Bigelow pension plan in November were believed to have stimulated the registration and transferring.

Election board workers were filing the new registrations today and it was expected that figures on the total registrations will be available soon.

Meanwhile only nine per cent of the 2,056 signatures on the Civil Service act referendum petitions circulated in Richland county board of elections, A. F. Porter, clerk, said today.

The board, which completed checking 64 petitions last night, found only 186 invalid signatures, Porter said. Most of the names ruled out were those of non-registered signers.

The petitions were returned to the secretary of state who will determine whether there are enough lgal signatures in Ohio to place the referendum on the ballot in November.

DEMS WAIT, TOO

Baer Announces Vote Drive Won't Start for Week.

Apparently following the lead set by the Republicans, the Democratic drive for votes at the municipal election Nov. 7 will not begin before next week, G. A. Baer, campaign chairman, said today.

Republican leaders announced yesterday they would not open their campaign until the week of Oct. 16, because they thought that "three weeks would be long enough" to present the issues to voters.

Baer said that he was of the "same opinion," adding that three weeks would allow for a campaign that would take speakers into all of the city's six wards.

Meanwhile it was announced that an executive meeting of the Richland county colored Democratic club will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday. Mose Haynes, chairman, said the meeting will be held at the organization's headquarters at 246 North Diamond street.

Campaign hats similar to those worn by army officers, will be worn by state highway patrolmen in the future.

The new hats are a slate grey color, with wide brims, and will replace the dark grey caps worn in the past. They will be worn by officers riding in patrol cars and on foot duty, Strayer said.

Caps will be worn for motorcycle duty. New midnight blue wool shirts for summer wear also will be added to the uniforms.

It will be fair and much cooler tomorrow as typical fall weather moves in from the west where temperatures were in the low 20's today.

The mercury never fell below 70 degrees in Mansfield last night to make it warmer than most nights last summer. Average temperature for the past 24 hours was 23 degrees above normal.

At noon today the mercury had climbed to 84 degrees, one below yesterday's peak reading. With a reading of 91 degrees, Cincinnati was the warmest spot in the nation yesterday.

TAFT, BRICKER REACH ACCORD

County Organizations to Name Delegates; 'Go Ahead' Signal Given Senator.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft and Gov. John W. Bricker —the former an avowed candidate for the 1940 presidential nomination and the latter a so-called "dark horse" -- have agreed on a method for selection of Ohio convention delegates.

They reached an accord at a secret meeting in the executive mansion here Sunday night, it was learned today, and political observers said it gave Taft the go-ahead sign.

The agreement amounts simply to a mutual understanding that county organizations will name the delegates of their own choice without consultation with either man.

Don Power, secretary to Governor Bricker, said Taft motored here from Cincinnati late Sunday.

"It was a very pleasant conference," Power related. "They just talked it over and decided that (the agreement) was the sensible thing to do."

Each delegate named, however, will be approved by Taft since, under Ohio law, a candidate must give delegates consent to use his name.

Taft announced his candidacy Aug. 3, shortly after Bricker said he was not a candidate and intended only to be a "good governor."

Commenting on the agreement, the Ohio State-Journal said it "removes the last chance of dispute between the men."

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—A brawny bodyguard today protected Henry Fonda's 2-year-old daughter, Jane Seymour, and Frances De Villers Brokaw, the 8-year-old heiress daughter of his society-figure wife by a former marriage, against possible kidnaping.

At the same time Los Angeles police continued, as they have done for almost a week, to patrol the film star's home.

A possible kidnap plot against the two Fonda children was revealed by the 18-year-old daughter of a real estate broker, who reported she had heard two men discuss the kidnaping on the street on Oct. 2.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

$5,000 FIRE HITS CENTRAL FRUIT

Short in Wiring Believed to Have Ignited Paper Cartons at Wholesale House.

Fire believed to have started from a short circuit in the electric wiring swept through the basement of the Central Fruit company shortly before noon today resulting in damage estimated by company officials at $5,000.

The blaze was discovered by an employe working in the basement who said that when he turned off the electric current at a switch, flames shot from the wiring and ignited paper stored in the room.

Firemen from companies No. 1, 2 and 4, under the direction of Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger, fought the blaze for nearly an hour before bringing it under control.

They said the flames swept through cartons of toilet tissue and that a quantity had to be moved to get to the fire.

Company officials who placed the estimates on the damage said the loss might run even higher. Besides damage of the paper, they reported that additional perishable stock stored in the basement was damaged by smoke and water.

CHAPTER XXVI

Stone passed the word on to the others, and Avis and Craig came in from the terrace. Avis volunteered to go and take the message to Miss Madison as she felt sure she could do it more gently than a man could.

The next day was Sunday, but that did not deter Assistant District Attorney Sutton from ordering everybody into the living room at 10 o'clock.

Earlier than that Fleming Stone had sought out Aggie. They walked along the paths of the kitchen garden, and Stone was impressed anew by the girl's quick intelligence.

"I am going to ask you to help me, Aggie," he said, "And I am sure that you quick wit will let you do my errand without letting any one see you, or know what you are up to."

"Yes, indeed, Mr. Stone, I can be very slick."

"You are parlor maid, I know, but couldn't you go in the rooms of the family and guests without being noticed?"

"Yes, sir, I can now; I couldn't if Hetty was here."

"It is in Hetty's interest that I am asking you to do what I want. You heard her talking about a little hairpin?"

"Oh, yes. She was loony, you know."

"Well, here is a hairpin." He showed Aggie the hairpin he had himself taken from Hetty's hair. "I want you to go in all the rooms in the house that are occupied by women. I mean the family and the guests and the servants. Look carefully on the dressers or toilette tables, and see if you can find hairpins exactly like this one."

"Most everybody wears those," Aggie said, looking doubtful.

"Yes, but they're not all exactly alike. Some are plain and straight, some have a little ripple, and they are not always the same color. If you find any that are just like this one, bring me one of them, and be sure to remember which room it came from. Watch for a chance to do some fine detective work. Can do?"

"Oh, yes, sir."

* * *

Stone then went to the room where Sutton had already begun his inquiry. He was questioning Cornelia.

"When did you last see Mrs. Garson?" he asked.

"Shortly before I went to dress to go on the motor ride. It was about 2 o'clock, I think, and Hetty came to me, to report that she had finished the cleaning of my brother's room, and asked me to go with her to see how nice it looked. I went with her, and, as always, her work was done to perfection. I told her so, and we had a few sad words about how we should all miss the master. She began to cry and I regretted I had spoken of our sorrow. I then told her that she looked tired, and that she must go and lie down for a while."

"She obeyed your instructions, Miss Madison, for I'm told that she lay down to rest about half-past two. She talked with several of the servants, and then she slept soundly. The report of the autopsy states that she had been drugged. Was she in the habit of taking any sedative?"

"Oh, no!" Cornelia said, "not to my knowledge."

"I feel, Miss Madison, there is no doubt but that Mrs. Garson was poisoned, and it is probable that the murderer drugged her first."

"But that would mean his being with her, for some time, wouldn't it? And why would anybody kill her? It is unbelievable!"

"We are trying our best to find out the criminal. You don't know of any one of the servants, who might have an enmity towards her?"

"No—no, indeed. Unless — that Italian, Baretti. He is an undergardener, and I have never liked his looks. I don't really know a thing against him, but he has a vicious face, it seems to me."

"Does any one else know anything about this man?" Sutton asked.

"I know this," Ames answered, "Mr. Madison was about to discharge him."

"For what reason?"

"He is quarrelsome, and he grumbles for higher wages, and none of the servants like him."

"The matter shall be looked into. My difficulty now is to find how and where the poison was given to Mrs. Garson. After leaving Miss Madison, she had a talk with her husband. They were in their own bedroom. Then—tell it yourself, Mr. Garson."

Elkanah drew a deep sigh.

"We had a talk, and then I said I must get to my work. I went out through the side kitchen door, and Hetty stayed behind talking with Mrs. Quinn, the cook. And Mrs. Quinn, she says Hetty said she was going to take a nap, and that's the last she saw of her."

After questioning Elkanah, Hetty's husband, who could shed no light on her murder, Assistant District Attorney Sutton said:

It's all very mysterious. I can't see how any stranger could get in, without being seen, and that throws it back on somebody in the house which seems equally impossible. You may go, Mr. Garson."

Gladly Elkanah left the room, and Fleming Stone quietly rose and followed him to his room, which was on the ground floor.

"Just a minute," he said pleasantly. "Tell me one thing, will you please."

Garson wasn't very cordial, but he said; "All right, sir. Sit down."

They sat down, and Stone said; "You were cleaning Mr. Madison's room with Hetty, yesterday, weren't you?"

"Yes, sir. We always does that kinda work together."

"And did you notice Hetty pick up any little thing and put it in her pocket?"

"Like a clue, you mean, about Mr. Madison's death? Why, no, and beside, Hetty didn't have no pocket. Women don't, nowadays."

"She didn't find anything then? I know she meant to look.'

"Not that I know of, she didn't. Unless—"

"Tell me."

"Well, it was when we was taken' the bed down. It's a great big heavy thing like a Noah's Ark. The mattresses was all off, and the springs too, and Hetty stepped right over the side piece and picked up somethin' from the middle of the floor. I mean the floor under the bed."

"What was it?"

"I dunno. I meant to ask her, but I forgot it."

"What did she do with it?"

"By gum! She stuck it in her hair! Mighta been that little teeny hairpin she was makin' such a fuss about?"

"A hairpin? Under Mr. Madison's bed? Well, that could be. A chambermaid, making the bed could have dropped it, and then it was kicked under."

"It coulda been that way. Mrs. Boyce sometimes sat there of an afternoon, and Miss Verne—she mighta gone in."

"Yes, that's true."

"What bothered Hetty about it, she thought the sweepin' had been done careless. My stars, Mr. Stone, I don't know what I'm goin' to do without her."

"I know. I'm very sorry for you, old man; you and Hetty were a model couple."

"Who do you s'pose done it, Mr. Stone?"

"That's a hard question. But I'm trying my best to find the answer. If you hear anything you think important, let me know."

"I will, sir; I sure will."

* * *

Stone went away, in search of Aggie, who he hoped might have some news for him. He found her looking for him and he took her into a small room and asked what she had found out.

"Nothing, I'm afraid," she said; "I've been in all the ladies' rooms and I can't match the hairpin up anywhere. Miss Verne's, they're kinda bronzey, and Mrs. Boyce's, they're yellow, like her blonde hair. Miss Cornelia, she didn't have any of these little ones, only just middling-sized shell ones."

"You did well. Have you had a chance at the servants' rooms?"

"Yes, sir. I didn't find any just like this. Every time I'd think I had it, they would be longer or shorter or different somehow. I can't do any more, sir."

Aggie looked distressed at her failure, but Stone said;

"You did very nicely indeed. If there weren't any around you couldn't find them. I may call on you for help again."

Delighted, Aggie promised not to mention the matter to anyone, and went her way.

Stone sat thinking, After all, the hairpin was a silly sort of clue. A hairpin didn't mean a murderer. He couldn't imagine a women doing such a deed. But he felt glad to know the hairpin did not belong to any of the household. Of course, the reason it made such an impression on Hetty was that she was shocked to find the every-day cleaners had neglected to dust under the bed.

He returned to the living-room. The lawyer, Kellogg had arrived, and he was explaining how the estate would be divided. Sutton, apparently, was not objecting to this interruption, and he doubtless thought that some information on the subject of inheritance might be helpful in placing the guilt.

"The apportionment by law is very simple," Kellogg stated. "It is merely a division of the whole estate into three parts, one part going to Miss Madison, one part to Mr. Craig Madison and one part to Mr. Thomas Sheldon. That is all the settlement directs. Any gifts to charities, employees, to the village or to friends, must be made by the legatees from their several shares. In connection with this, I will say for Miss Verne's benefit, that there is no provision for any money to be paid to her. If the legatees wish to, they can apportion to her such amounts as they see fit."

Miss Verne stared at the speaker. She turned very white, and said, scathingly: "I fail to see why you should say that, Mr. Kellogg and I resent it greatly!"

"You may resent it, Miss Verne, but you cannot truthfully say you don't know why I say it, at this time."

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1939.

What continental Europe needs is a couple of good baseball leagues.

As for the war, both sides seem convinced that they've got to lick each other; and gosh, how they dread it!

William Z. Foster, Communist party chairman, says Stalin is not cooperating with the Nazis. Why, he's sharing everything the Nazis grab.

The Cost of a Sacrifice

A NEWS RELEASE from the Czechoslovak National Council of America makes an interesting point concerning the armed strength of the Allies as they confront Germany—with emphasis on the armed strength they might have had, but haven't.

The Czechs haven't gotten over—and no one can blame them—the fact that their country was sacrificed by Britain and France a year ago.

And so the author of the news release can be imagined to be wearing a look of grim satisfaction as he wrote these words:

"Exactly a year ago the western democracies, France and Great Britain, had as their ally, the Czechoslovak nation, with an army of 2,000,000 men . . . 2,000 exceptionally well-equipped airplanes, an army equipped with one modern machine gun for every six soldiers and a nation protected with fortifications better than the Maginot line. Munich enabled Germany to improve its Siegfried line, which will cost France tens of thousands of human lives. Germany gained several thousands of tanks and the best heavy guns produced by the world-famous munitions plants of Brno, the Skoda plants in Pilsen and others."

There is more—but that is enough. At that time, France and Britain thought they were insuring peace by sacrificing Czechoslovakia.

Now they know the sacrifice was in vain—and they know, and undoubtedly regret deeply, the item of cost the Czechs have here pointed out.

More National Forests

THE PEOPLE of this country now own 161 national forests. The latest additions are the Mark Twain and Clark forests in the Ozarks and the Shawnee forest in southern Illinois. Their ultimate boundaries have been defined and the first large purchases of land made. Not all the land is bought at once. The government is merely authorized to acquire it gradually as opportunity affords.

In these particular regions the government will take up from time to time run-down or abandoned farm land which has been damaged by erosion or by too heavy timber cutting. It will also buy other land suitable for forestation and its commercial by-products, watershed protection, fire control and other public benefits. The Ozark forests are characterized by the typical ridges, hills and ravines of the region.

Americans who have ever had real acquaintance with any of the country's national or state forests rejoice when new ones are established and old ones enlarged and improved. Such areas provide pleasant recreation spots. They are important in soil conservation and flood prevention. They guarantee the preservation of what remains undestroyed of our original wilderness. They shelter native wild life—birds and beasts and plants—which might otherwise become extinct.

Real Peace

IF WE Americans were engaged in war again—which God forbid—we would be united in one cause. At peace, we are not so sure of domestic unity.

This may be all right politically, if partisan passion is not carried too far; in a free country there is value in wholesome criticism by minorities. But in some other fields it doesn't work so well. In labor wars, for example, where fruitless strife tends to thwart normal operation of the economic system, endangering national prosperity and security.

"Peace, like charity, begins at home," the President suggests to the rival labor groups. "Perhaps the highest service we Americans can render at this time is to determine that our personal liberty, our democratic ways of life, our free representative government, make it possible for us to disagree among ourselves over many things without bitterness, and find quickly the means of settlement and adjustment of controversy when it has gone far enough."

Many Americans, in private life as well as public life, think these destructive quarrels have gone far enough. And so have many feuds and rivalries in the business world.

A Smooth West Fourth?

WEST FOURTH STREET certainly seems to be keeping in the news these days.

First it was the proposal of the state to eliminate both the B. and O. and Erie crossings, just beyond the city limits, with city and county help—and now it's another state plan, this one for the re-paving of the street within the city limits, with city and state sharing the cost equally.

The crossing proposal met with rather stormy going, with the county first declining to participate to the extent asked, then attaching qualifications so that the cost wouldn't interfere with the county debt retirement plan that will see the last of the county's debt bonds retired shortly.

A final decision on the crossing plan is due soon. Meanwhile, it is to be hoped that the city can finance its suggested share of the new proposal—re-paving of the street within the city limits.

After all, Fourth street, part of a heavily traveled main highway, has long needed to have the bumps eliminated. This sounds like a good way to get it done.

Pig Problem

AN UNUSUAL PROBLEM has been agitating the nearby city of Tiffin, a town of 17,000 people. There seem to be a lot of pigs in that town, too many for the comfort of many citizens. People keep them in their yards, in spite of a recent ordinance which forbids raising swine within 300 feet of dwellings.

There has been a good deal of agitation now for enforcement of the law. The pig-raisers stand on their rights, and are supported by many citizens who have no direct interest in pigs but have a keen interest in taxes. These citizens object that if the pig-raisers are deprived of their piggeries, 200 such families will be forced on relief rolls. As between pigs and public charity, they prefer to endure the pigs.

Most city people would probably say that this is a matter of taste, or rather smell, rather than a mere budgetary problem.

Don't abuse the weather. It's the only normal thing left.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Impossible events sometimes come to pass along Broadway. Every girl who thinks she can dance or sing or act often dreams of walking cold into the office of a producer or band-leader and boldly asking for a job—and getting it.

Four years ago a girl who thought she could sing walked into a room where Louis Prima was rehearsing a swing band, and asked for a chance to show him how well she would fit into his organization. Prima asked her to sing several numbers. "You have a nice voice," he told her, "but you lack style."

Without charging her anything Louis began teaching her. After awhile she would drop into his place in 52nd street and sing a number or two each evening with the band. She got the "feel" of swing band crooning. This was a lot of fun, and it was good practice. One night while she was "practicing" a film scout called her over and offered her a tiny part in one of Bing Crosby's pictures. She came out of this "bit" with a name of her own, and you'll recognize it as Martha Raye.

A few nights ago a quite pretty, demure little girl whose age is 17 and whose name is Patricia Miller, left her mushroom sandwich half eaten and advanced to the bandstand. This was Hickory House, and Louis Prima (he does get around) was again on hand. She wondered, please, if Mr. Prima would let her sing a song, just one, just one little song. Most band leaders are pestered unmercifully with people in public places, and ordinarily Prima would have said he was sorry but not now. In this instance he surprised himself by saying, Okay.

Do not leap to conclusions. She is not a strange, glamorous unknown who leaped from obscurity to the big time. She hasn't done anything yet. But she sang that night. "It's like this," Prima mumbled, "You have a nice voice, but you lack style."

So he is teaching her style. . . . But not in public places, where film scouts can drift by and take his discoveries away to Hollywood. If this girl is another Martha Raye, Prima wants to make the discovery himself—and not by going to the movies.

In Chambers street is a window with a most peculiar sign: "The Rest Social Club." . . . But in this window is a machine-gun, a trench helmet, a hand grenade, and bayonet. I can't figure it out.

The fight in the Stork club the other night between Sidney Solomon, who used to run the Central Park Casino, and George White, producer of the "Scandals," adds two more names to the long list of notables who have settled their differences with fists in public places. Everybody remembers the fight between Max Eastman, who wrote "Enjoyment of Laughter," and Ernest Hemingway, who is famous for "Death in the Afternoon" in the office of their publisher a couple of years back. Rudy Vallee has been in half a dozen squabbles; Sinclair Lewis, the author, exchanged blows with a fellow author at a banquet in New York.

Sherman Billingsley, owner of the Stork, was so angered that both contestants, and indeed all people who ever have indulged in public brawls, have been forbidden his door. Which, if you ask me, is rashness of a most amazing character . . . considering how many customers of the night spots are on that blacklist.

We're All Perplexed.

Then there was the case of the man found wandering around in Washington, who couldn't remember his name or residence or what particular brand of neutrality he had been plugging for.—Worcester Daily Telegram.

The Temperature Problem Is Getting Complicated

New Neutrality Headache—Ships

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Repeal of the arms embargo will not end war measures and war debates on Capitol Hill. After the ban is lifted, and cash and carry substituted, the next question will be how the British can "come and get it." They will need ships, ships and more ships. Who is going to supply these ships? Obviously the United States is going to supply a lot of them. Building and selling ships to Britain right now would not be counter to the present neutrality law. The only change in this respect will be that Britain will have to pay for them after cash and carry is restored.

Congress is already worrying about the possibilities here. Private enterprise would solve the problem by avoiding two embarrassments: 1. No action by congress would be necessary; 2. No credit, hence no violation of the Johnson act would be necessary.

But congress is afraid the pressure for government action will grow as more and more ships are sunk and the threat to starve Britain out rises—pressure for new Hog Islands to turn out ships by the mile. It senses in advance pressure from the country, as concern over the fate of the democracies grows, and from the administration.

Congress is not kidding itself any, except in speeches, about the present neutrality debate. It knows the embargo is being repealed because Britain and France vitally need a supply of munitions from this country, of which airplanes are by all odds the most important. It knows also that, this need having been supplied, the next crisis will come on transport for these supplies. It knows that the pressure for ships will be wider and broader than the present pressure for repeal.

Already the tobacco growers are worried because Britain can not spare bottoms for tobacco when the need for other things is so much greater. Shortage of shipping will strike industry after industry as ships are used for only the most sorely needed cargoes.

But when and if the fight comes to have the United States government get behind mass production of ships, the threat of actual involvement of this country in the war will be much greater than that seen by the isolationist group in the present row over repeal of the arms embargo.

Selling ships to Britain—for it will be of no avail to put them under the United States flag if the law bans their sailing to belligerent ports, as it is in the present draft and likely to stay there—will be the most substantial and direct aid to Britain that this country could possibly extend. Actually well within the rights of a neutral nation under international law, it would be more valuable to Britain and France than a new A. E. F.

Naturally this will produce the strongest possible desire on the part of Germany to retaliate. Her attitude toward the United States will not differ in the slightest degree from what it would be if the United States had declared war.

Indeed the German government believed, in 1917, that the entry of the United States in the war would actually help rather than hurt them. This miscalculation, based on reports from the otherwise astute German ambassador in Washington as well as other information, was based on the notion that, if the United States were preparing an army, it would for a time divert war supplies from the export line to France in order to equip our own army. The Germans figured that meantime they could win the war.

Ohio Anecdotes

Fated to Be President?

Dueling, argumentative Winfield Scott, military hero in the Mexican war, believed himself destined to become president, but at several national conventions he just missed the boat.

Whigs meeting in Philadelphia in 1839 had Scott, Henry Clay, and Benjamin Harrison to choose from. Harrison was their choice.

Although Scott was eligible again in 1843, he was passed over. After victories over the Mexicans in 1846 to '48 he appeared to be the likeliest candidate, but again he failed to receive nomination.

Came 1852 and Scott did get the nomination, but he was badly beaten at the polls. Not fazed by his defeat, the 74-year-old veteran still was hopeful in 1860.

Historians' unanimous opinion today is that Scott would have been found lacking had he been elected.

Listen, World!

A Tantrum's a Tantrum—at 60 or 6!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

EVER STOP to think what a different world this would be if we treated Peevish Oldsters as we do Ornery Youngsters? Or how much happier and healthier those Oldsters themselves would be?

It's a curious practice—that ancient system which hustles Junior off to the woodshed and rewards Dad with the best slice of white meat for exactly the same ructions. Personally, I could never see wherein a 60-year-old tantrum differed from a 6-year-old one.

"Why," marveled I to my young self, "should it be Perfectly Permissible for a Grown-up to interrupt, contradict, meddle, fib, yell, whine; take unfair advantage and be a poor sport generally—yet Absolutely Outrageous for a Young One?"

Was there some subtle superiority about hardened arteries, double chins, hairy warts and "bay windows" which entitled you to special rights . . . and would I know the deep, dark secret when I got that way myself?

Well, I'm that way myself, now . . . or almost. I may not quite qualify for a Museum Piece but it's years and years since my bridgework would stand heavy traffic or anyone hollered, "Hiya Babe!" But I'm as far as ever from the answers to this particular riddle.

Yes, my temper is still doing business at the same old stand. I still have one of those sudden dizzy spells if someone's getting the best of me in an argument. And I can pull as nice a flock o' pouts as you ever saw, if I can't have my own way. But have I acquired any matured wit or wisdom to compensate for these facts? Have my Noble Acts or Tragic Sufferings entitled me to special respect and consideration? I'd give an ear to say they have! But the disgusting truth, Partner, is—they haven't!

When I bust a plate, nowadays, and a couple of bloodvessels, they call it "temperament" instead of "temper," and refer to my "striking personality."

But that's just polite camouflage. Actually, there isn't a smitch of difference between the shindigs I pull today and those I staged some 40 years ago. Nor do I deserve a particle more consideration. I'm not a "great soul on the rack" nor a "genius in the throes of creation" . . . I'm just another mad mama, getting by with murder because, to our shame—it's a recognized, legitimate middle-aged racket.

And if I had my just comuppance, I'd be eating my supper from the mantlepiece with the rest of the bad-tempered brats.

And these unhappy facts apply to all of us. A tantrum is a tantrum at any age—a poor sport is a poor sport whether he wears a baby's didies or a dean's gown. Age does not alter the nature of Bad Manners — nor should it decrease their penalties. If rudeness is offensive in Youth, it is downright detestable in Maturity, for the Seniors hold all the cards and are protected by all the sentimental conventions and traditions.

However, even though he may skip the woodshed—and bounce Junior off to bed—the bad-mannered adult faces an inevitable pay-off. He was meant to have that which he so stormily demands—affection, respect, consideration, a place of power and authority. He believes these are his Rights. And they would be—if he had not sacrificed them for petty rage, envy and spite.

Does that make sense? Think it over, Grandpa!

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WE DROVE ALONG country roads until we came to a winding hollow, which a peaceful, patient stream had made. When we came upon a soft, fresh grassy plot where a little spring gushed out from the hillside, we stopped, spread blankets on the ground, where the wee ones could rest, and made ready to build a fire upon a gravelly stretch.

For this the older children brought dry leaves and small dead sticks, while I walled up a rustic hearth to place the kettle on.

In this secluded nook there was such slight movement of the air that the fire we kindled did not burn very well at first. But presently we felt the gentle warmth and watched the reddish crackling flames leap through the cracks in the wall. The steam within the kettle lifted the lid at intervals and rushed out in little vapory puffs. Fragrant, bluish smoke rose silently in the quiet air and spread out thinly above the tall treetops, like a looseknit garment.

We sat about our little fire and watched bright red and yellow leaves fall one by one upon the surface of the slow moving stream and float quietly out of sight around a bend. A chipmunk darted in and out among the exposed roots of a beech that stood along the bank, chattering lustily. A gray squirrel jumped out on a slender leafy red oak branch above our heads, and barked.

On the farther bank, high up along the slope, we saw a colony of yellow marigolds stretched in a narrow line along the rim of bank and nodding in the breeze that swept the higher surface. The creeping brambles showed patches of flaming red and yellow leaves, and deep orange berries accented the tangle of clambering bittersweet.

Then we heard quick heavy steps, and saw a man slide down the steep bank, grabbing at small trees to slow his descent. He wore a dark uniform, and heavy leather leggings.

"Did you know," he said, "that this is a private estate, where you have camped?"

"No," said I, "we did not. Everything is so rustic and untouched, that I thought some common farmer owned it and would not mind our stopping."

"My orders were to ask you to leave at once."

We broke camp immediately, packed our things in the car, and started on.

"Well," said our little daughter, "he drove us out. But we will always remember the smell of the fire, and how the yellow flowers nodded on the bank, and how blue the patches of sky were between the treetops."

"That's true," said I. "Nothing is really anyone's until he can enjoy it."

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—When Prime Minister Chamberlain first got the news of Hitler's alliance with Soviet Russia, his aides say that he shut himself up in a room for several hours and pored over the map of Europe.

After he had finished, Chamberlain told his cabinet that the hook-up between Stalin and Hitler was the best thing that could have happened to England. This opinion is by no means shared by some other members of the British cabinet, but time may prove that Chamberlain is right.

In the first place, it is obvious that Hitler cannot entirely trust Stalin. Therefore he cannot leave the Polish border unprotected. At least fifteen or twenty German divisions will have to remain there, which is more than the German general staff kept on the eastern front after Russia's defeat in 1918.

Furthermore, the Prussian Junkers of eastern Germany must be in a very uneasy and anti-Hitler state of mind.

* * *

Frightened Landlords.

In this part of Europe exists the most autocratic landlord caste in the world. The Prussian Junker is born to rule. Some join the army, some manage the vast plantations of East Prussia. Their word is law. It is enforced with the horse-whip and the pistol.

The ruling class of Poland was little different from the Prussian Junkers. Imagine, therefore, how the Junkers must feel with Karl Radek landlord-hunting just across the new Polish border. It will soon be possible to throw a stone—probably with propaganda tied to it—from a Soviet collectivized farm in Russian Poland to a feudal Junker barony in Prussia.

So don't be surprised if the ruling classes of Germany jot down a few black marks after Hitler's name. After all, they never did love him. And the sight of Joe Stalin putting big chunks of Europe in the Soviet market-basket can't be very welcome.

Note—Only country so far victorious in the world war is Russia. The realization of that fact eventually may bring peace.

Murphy's Sweetheart.

Frank Murphy has a new sweetheart. She fell in love with him when she saw his picture on a magazine cover. It was the red hair and red, bushy eyebrows which got her. She flew a thousand miles to Washington, bringing a bouquet of lilies for her unseen darling.

She went to his office, presented the lilies, and came away with a photograph, affectionately autographed. Only joker in the tale is that the lady in question is five years old.

She is Miss Anne Mallon, daughter of Mrs. Mary Mallon, an American widow who has been living in Barbadoes. When Miss Anne first saw Murphy's picture, she became highly excited. "Mommy," she said, "I want to marry him!"

When war conditions made living difficult in British Barbadoes, the Mallons returned to the States by plane—no steamers available—and Miss Anne brought a bouquet, and a determination to see the man of her dreams.

They arrived in Washington, and a friend called the attorney general's secretary, asking that she receive the flowers. But the secretary said that Mr. Murphy hearing that the lady was only five years old, would like to receive the giver of the lilies.

So Miss Anne finally met her hero.

Suppressed War Plan.

A printed notice appears on the cover of the Army's much discussed Industrial Mobilization plan, which outlines a semi-dictatorial super-government to run the United States in case of war. The notice says: "Public Document. United States Government printing office. For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C."

But just try to buy a copy! It can't be done. You not only can't buy one, but you can't borrow one. In the last several weeks, ever since the Plan became a matter of wide public comment and conjecture, copies of it have become scarcer than hen's teeth.

So thorough has the quietus been put on the document that the only way a high Justice department official could secure a copy was to photostat one in the hands of a newspaperman.

The War department says it knows nothing about the sudden disappearance of the document, but it's on open secret that the military have become very sensitive about the IMP. The President's out-of-the-blue announcement that the War Resources Board would be junked jarred them severely.

A possible clue to the military attitude may be found by reading the footnotes. They are not the kind of comments likely to bring cheers from a war-chary citizenry and Congress.

Furthermore, the footnotes indicate that there were several cat-and-dog fights among the Army men who drew up the Industrial Mobilization Plan.

Draft-Exempt Bankers.

For instance, Title V dealing with the War Finance Commission states that "No member so appointed shall refuse to serve as a member of such commission." This refers to the appointemnt of bankers to the finance commission at a salary of $10,000 a year.

But after making this stipulation, the footnote which follows tosses out the requirement that bankers must serve. It reads:

"The bill states that no member so appointed shall refuse to serve. It is not believed that this is a wise provision, as a man who served against his will in a position of the character set forth would not normally give good service."

In other words, the youth of the nation would be conscripted, whether they liked it or not, but the bankers would be treated differently—even though they were paid $10,000 a year for their services.

Merry-Go-Round.

Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt has held several private conferences with opposing officials of the American Medical association in an effort to work out a nationwide public health bill. The administration plans to push such a measure at the regular session of Congress . . . There was only one fatality in the last student pilot training program conducted by the Civil Aeronautics Authority . . . The National Youth administration is one of the few government agenices without a legal staff—despite strong disapproval by certain government lawyers who have been trying to pressure Administrator Aubrey Williams to hire attorneys . . . During the first quarter of this year the number of women applicants for government old-age insurance increased from 32 to 39 per cent. When the Social Security system was initiated in 1936, the proportion of women applicants was 27.7 per cent.

NAZIS RETREAT, FRENCH CLAIM

Germans Turned Back Under Heavy Fire in Attacks Near Saarbruecken.

ment as Premier Daladier put the finishing touches on the radio speech he will deliver tonight in reply to Adolf Hitler's peace gestures.

Political sources said Daladier's address, scheduled for 8 p m. (2 p. m., EST) would be a clear restatement of French-British war aims and a general review of the international situation.

While reports from the front indicated the Germans were gradually employing large units in assaults in the Saarbruecken sector, French observers said it was impossible to say whether the increased Nazi activity was a prelude to a major offensive Germans Claim Victory at Front.

BERLIN —(UP)— For the first time since the war began, the German army high command today announced that reich forces on the western front have scored an advance

The announcement aroused speculation as to whether Germany is bringing military pressure to bear against France as a means of influencing the forthcoming speeches of Premier Edouard Daladier and British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who are to make replies to Chancellor Hitler's peace proposals today and tomorrow

According to an official war communique, the advance on the western front was "slight" The communique merely stated·

"The advance (on the east) toward the Russo-German borderline is progressing.

"There was a slight advance after artillery activity on the western front."

them counter-proposals to those he made.

Most members of the chief political parties, conservative, liberal and labor, held that Hitler's own terms were absolutely unacceptable. But there was a strong feeling that if Hitler wanted to submit a reasonable offer — one which would be recognized by the world as involving no allied surrender and as offering hope for a lasting, honorable peace—the allies naturally would be glad to consider it.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, long an "appeaser," was now among the firmest advocates of a strong British policy. He was understood to be working harmoniously with Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty and archenemy of German Nazism

Chamberlain was said to have written personally some of the most biting passages in a ministry of information commentary last Friday night on Hitler's speech, a commentary which contemptuously dismissed the Nazi peace bid as hardly worth considering.

The Townsend people are opposed to the Bigelow plan largely because we believe that a pension plan should be universal over all of the states, and that to signal out one state was to place its business men at a disadvantage when competing with other states," he added.

"While there has been some discussion as to whether the federal government would pay any of the pensions funds under the Bigelow plan, the best authorities are agreed that it would not, because the Bigelow plan is not based on individual needs but awards the pension to all persons over 60, while the federal matching funds are based on the need of individuals or couples for financial aid."

Hess advocating the Townsend plan, pointed out its advantages and practical phases as compared with the Bigelow plan He is on a tour of Ohio, and will speak at Port Clinton this afternoon and at Jeromesville tonight.

molested because we want to live our life in our vital space according to our own principles."

Hitler's speech at the Deutschland hall intensified the German peace offensive in the apparent hope that some development might yet prevent outright rejection of his terms. (The first formal indication of the Allied replied to Hitler was expected in a speech later today by French Premier Edouard Daladier).

Hitler said that the German people should give liberally to winter relief.

"We could have appealed to the taxpayer" he reminded them, "but we wanted to call upon everyone voluntarily to make some sacrifice

"Everyone must realize there is still much aid required and many who require it."

Hitler said that "in this sense I open the war for winter relief May winter relief helpers prove themselves worthy of the heroes at the front and compensate for the sins committed by the country in 1914-18 against the warriors of the World war"

Hardy, McFarland Among Bricker's Guests at Social

Ralph Hardy, county Republican executive committee chairman, and Earl McFarland, state central committeeman from the 17th district, were among the 150 guests of Gov John W. Bricker last night at a social gathering at the governor's mansion in Columbus

The governor discussed patronage and the Civil Service reorganization referendum with the group, explaining that it was impossible to get jobs for all of the party workers who wanted them throughout the state

Although a number of county chairmen have protested that their counties were "left out of the picture" in the matter of patronage, Hardy said he was "well satisfied" with the number of jobs Republicans had received in Richland county.

Attending last night's meeting were Republican county chairman, state committeemen, members of the governor's cabinet and Republican elected state officials The meeting was one of a series of three at which the governor will be host to G. O. P leaders

FOUR DAYS LEFT

West Side Water Customers Warned of Deadline.

Only four days remain in the current west side water collection period, Fred E Lingafelter, secretary of the water, sewer and garbage department, pointed out today as he reminded customers that 10 per cent penalties will be added to bills paid after Oct 15.

Approximately 37 per cent of the bills now due have been paid since the opening day of the collection period, Oct. 1, Lingafelter said.

Receipts to date represent about $11,000, or approximately 3,100 accounts. There is a total of 8,500 accounts on the west side and the billing totaled little more than $41,000.

Lingafelter said there will be no extension of the collection period past the deadline Saturday.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Oct. 11.

A day of unpredictable and unprecedented events is forecast from quite thrilling planetary configurations. There is a sign of sudden and radical upheaval which may have far-reaching effect on the future fortunes, activities and destiny. An extravagant outlay of funds may be needed to effect this re-ordering of the life and its objectives. Personal affiliations are involved, possibly in the direction of romance.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a memorable and thrilling year, with events of major importance having a radical influence on the business, social and domestic life. Romance and adventure, with many angles of expression, loom large and may cause a rather lavish investment of funds, skill and energy. A complete and drastic about-face seems imminent, with happy crises far beyond the present scope of vision.

A child born on this day may have a daring, audacious, original and dynamic nature, impelling it to unpredictable heights in the quest of adventure and romance. It may have extraordinary experiences and figure in spectacular or revolutionary accomplishments.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

LILLIAN draped over my outstretched arms the costume I was to wear for the "rehearsal" visit to the restaurant, gathered up her own regalia and we went into the bedroom of the two-room apartment, leaving Harry arranging his elaborate make-up box.

"Will we have time for a shower?" I asked.

"Plenty!" she answered promptly. "Harry's parked for the next half hour, or whatever more time there is. You go ahead and get yours, and then I'll help you into your gown. There's a smock to cover it while Harry's working over your hair and make-up, so you can dress completely right here. Then I'll take my shower and you can help me dress. After that we'll go back and get dolled up."

Lillian took one glance at my face, then rose and put her hands on my shoulders.

"You won't help Dicky by worrying over him," she said with her usual prescience. "Just park all your miseries for the duration of this expedition. Otherwise, you won't be alert, your brain cells, including your memory, won't function, and you'll be a washout when you're most needed."

I pulled myself together with a mighty effort.

"They're all parked," I told her with a poor excuse for a smile. "What shoes do I wear with this gown?"

"Those military-heeled walking shoes," she returned. "Old ladies aren't supposed to risk their brittle bones upon high heels. Oh! some do, I grant you, but not the sensible kind you and I are going to portray."

"Then I'll get into my shoes right away," I said, and suited the action to the word. When I stood up again, Lillian held a dark silk slip up before me.

"See how this fits," she said, and I obediently held up my arms and put it on.

"That's all right," she said. "Couldn't be better. Now the nice old lady gown."

She invested me in the gown, stepped back and approved it with eyes and voice.

"Do I know how to pick 'em?" she asked cockily, but when I would have turned to a mirror she forestalled me.

"Nix, nay, nix," she said. "No mirrors until Harry has achieved the full effect. And I want to be around when you catch the first glimpse of yourself. Now sit down and relax while I shower and dress."

Lillian, wrapped in a bathrobe and on her way to the shower, suddenly stopped, fumbled in her suitcase and brought out a leather case enclosing a pack of playing cards. The next instant she laid case and cards down on the table beside me.

"I know," she said, "that you consider solitaire to be the last resource of an empty mind, but, believe you me, it also is a mighty effective means of emptying a full mind of troublesome thoughts. Get busy on that last Chinese one I taught you. You won't have time to finish it, but that's a matter of no importance, for it will fill up space in your brain where thoughts have no business just now. So go to it with my blessing."

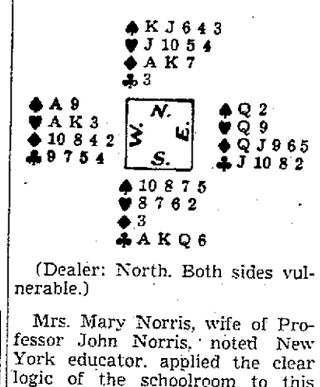
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

RECALL THE AUCTION

Players who cannot recall to their minds the bids which were made, and their concomitant effect upon non-bidders, are likely to make slips in the play of the hand. If the declarer can remember that it was easy for one opponent to stick in an overcall, but that the other did not get a chance until the bidding was too high, the latter is much more likely to have a bunch of high cards than his partner.

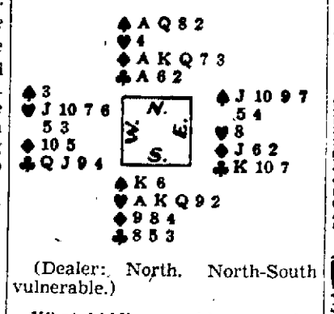


(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

Mrs. Mary Norris, wife of Professor John Norris, noted New York educator, applied the clear logic of the schoolroom to this deal and as a consequence earned a rich reward. She had bid 1-Spade in the North and her partner leaped at once to 4-Spades.

East led the diamond Q to the K. This was followed by three clubs for two heart discards and then Mrs. Norris led the spade 10. When West played the 9, she came up promptly with the K and as a consequence could lose nothing but one trick in trumps and two in hearts.

When the play was over somebody asked how she guessed the location of the ace. "It was not guess work," she explained. "If East held a very big hand, he could have overcalled easily at the range of two, whereas West could have had an immense one and still could not have risked overcalling 4-Spades. Therefore, any high card was more likely to have been with West than with East." Of course, the opponents could have reeled off four tricks at the start in the major suits, but that is another story.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)
